

A BAD ALL-ROUND BREAK IN GRAIN PRICES.

THE MARKETS ALL CLOSED AT A DECLINE.

Sentiment Was Not in the Least
Bullish and Advices Favored the Selling Side.

If the expectations of some of the local traders had been realized yesterday a further advance in values would probably have taken place in the grain markets, but they were not, and instead there was an all-round decline, that in the case of the two leading speculative cereals was sharp and decisive. From the way these markets closed Wednesday, these friends to higher prices were greatly encouraged and looked forward to a continuation of the strength witnessed then and a probable further increase in prices; but in this they were bitterly disappointed, a complete change came from taking place. Bull sentiment, which appeared on the surface to be in ascendency, and almost from the start the tone showed weakness and the tendency of prices toward a lower level. A half-hearted attempt to make early to hold prices up again did not go with any success, however, apparently being easily dispersed, and it made no difference how bullet some of the advices might be, they failed to arouse enthusiasm or stimulate buying. On the other hand, the market's encircled by unfavorable conditions and the selling pressure that was witnessed throughout the day, with the result as stated above.

Traders were surprised to believe from the way the wheat market opened up that the strength witnessed during the last half of Wednesday's session was to be continued, but they were reckoning without their host, or considering what developments later in the way of news might decide.

The early strength, if not much, could readily be accounted for by the fact that the market, after a long period of quiet, was again on the surface to be in ascendency.
